CORPORATE UNITED SUPPLIERS PROVIDE MEMBERS WITH GREEN PROCUREMENT OPTIONS

CLEVELAND — Jan. 30, 2008 — Corporate United, the nation’s leading group purchasing organization, has begun identifying and distinguishing the green initiatives of its suppliers and encouraging members to take advantage of contracts with sustainability features.

“Responsible, green, sustainable initiatives are now an imperative,” said Andrea Morton, Corporate United supplier manager. “By recognizing the significant efforts of our suppliers and connecting them with our member companies, we are participating in the global mission to improve environmental conditions. Our goal is to help members make better informed and more responsible decisions.”

By connecting member companies with suppliers offering green options, members are able to incorporate sustainability into their corporate procurement strategy by participating in contracts with environmental and sustainability features.

Following is an overview of the environmental standards and policies being implemented by some of Corporate United’s leading supplier partners:

CentiMark

CentiMark Corporation, North America’s leading commercial roofing contractor, utilizes environmentally sound business practices and environmentally responsible products. By using reflective roof materials, the company reduces the urban heat island effect. Additionally, through effective and economic recycling of roofing materials, CentiMark reduces landfill waste. For additional information about CentiMark and its environmental policy, visit www.centimark.com.

Cintas

Cintas Promotional Products, the sixth largest promotional products distributor, works hard to protect the environment and conserve natural resources. Many of Cintas' promotional products are made with recycled or recyclable materials, organic materials and are biodegradable. For additional information about Cintas and its environmental policy, visit www.cintas.com.

InterCall

InterCall, a division of West Corporation, is the largest service provider in the world, specializing in conference communications. InterCall hosts GreenConferencing.com, a resource that provides education on using conferencing and other practices that can be employed to reduce carbon emissions and operate businesses in a more sustainable fashion. The site includes links to educational resources, environmental organizations with which InterCall partners, and a blog on current topics that effect companies' efforts to "work green."

In addition, InterCall is a Platinum sponsor of Climate Action, a joint development of Sustainable Development International and the United Nations Environment Programme. This program promotes sustainable business practices to corporations and governments worldwide through the distribution of educational materials, events and public media. Office Max

OfficeMax, one of the largest office products distributors in North America, is committed to supplying their products and services in a manner that is sensitive to environmental issues. From the sourcing to the delivery of products, OfficeMax minimizes potentially adverse environmental impacts. For additional information about OfficeMax's environmental policy, visit www.officemax.com.

Spectrum Water Coolers, Inc.

Spectrum Water Coolers, the nationwide source for office bottle-less water coolers, reduces its environmental impact by lowering energy consumption and dramatically minimizing greenhouse gas emissions.

Switching out bottled water for Spectrum Water Coolers reduces greenhouse gas emissions by 98% because it eliminates bottle manufacturing, bottling, storage, distribution, delivery, as well as the removal, recycling, and dumping of used bottles. In addition, Spectrum coolers cut energy usage by 65% over regular water coolers. Spectrum's quality filtered water is chemically identical to bottled water and virtually
