CORPORATE UNITED NAMED TO SUPPLY & DEMAND CHAIN EXECUTIVE 100 FOR SECOND CONSECUTIVE YEAR

CLEVELAND — August 9, 2007 — Corporate United, the nation’s leading group purchasing organization, has been chosen by Supply & Demand Chain Executive magazine as an Executive 100 supply chain thought leader for the second consecutive year. The company was awarded this honor for its innovative group purchasing practices, leading to exceptional advantages for its members within the supply chain.

The Executive 100 list identifies extraordinary providers of supply chain services and technologies that are leading the way within the marketplace, uncovering the best practices and processes companies are utilizing to bring new competitive advantage to their supply chains. The list is comprised of leading supply chain solution providers, consultants and organizations chosen by the Supply & Demand Chain Executive editorial staff.

Corporate United Chief Operating Officer Marc Rosen says the organization is proud to be recognized as an industry thought leader. “We are uniquely focused on creating a dynamic network that not only provides members with sourcing and contract management solutions, but also engages them in information-sharing and educational opportunities that transcend the traditional models of group purchasing. Our goal is to nurture corporate collaboration that genuinely serves the needs of our members and provides leverage beyond price negotiations.”
